

SPOs and CSPD at FSBM: Deciphering the Alphabet Soup

www.fox.temple.edu

The Fox School of Business and Management (FSBM) is one of the largest, most comprehensive business schools in the nation. How can you stand out in such a competitive environment? The Fox School stresses involvement in Student Professional Organizations (SPOs) as a way for you to gain the "soft skills" that employers are seeking. Teamwork, leadership, and networking skills are just a few of the things you can gain by involvement in a SPO.

Involvement in a SPO is not the only way gain professional polish. The Center for Student Professional Development (CSPD) is the Fox School's "career center with a twist". The workshops and counseling the Center provides for Fox School students goes a long way in preparing you with the tools you will need to succeed in the competitive internship and full-time job market.

Use this simple formula to make the most out of your time at the Fox School of Business:

Deciphering the alphabet soup is one of the keys to success at the Fox School. How do you solve this puzzle and go on to gain the intangibles you will need to start your career? Here are some of the steps you should be taking now to take advantage of all we have to offer:

- Go to www.fox.temple.edu/org and find information about our SPOs and join one.
- Go to www.fox.temple.edu/cspd and begin to attend professional development work shops through the CSPD.
- Go to www.fox.temple.edu/ciber/abroad.htm and check out the many study abroad options open to Fox School students.